

Conclusion

HealthAid aims to intercept young adults as they gain independence in their healthcare treatment.

Precedent analysis and preliminary testing have demonstrated that users are interested in learning how to take care of their health outside of an office, and are receptive to an in-home physical device.

Further user testing and iterative product development will ensure HealthAid makes the most significant impact possible on the health of its users.

Thank You